Australian Youth Aerospace Forum (AYAF)

AYAF is a five-day residential program held at The University of Queensland, designed for students across Australia who are curious about careers in the aerospace industry. The forum aims to give students a hands-on look at the exciting opportunities available in both higher education and the wider aerospace sector after school.

Over the course of the week, attendees will connect with like-minded peers, engage with university students and academics, and hear directly from professionals working in the field. Past forums have featured everything from industry Q&A panels with pilots and engineers, to planetarium visits and live demonstrations at cutting-edge university labs.

This year's forum runs from the 30/11- 5/12. The estimated cost of $500 includes all meals, accommodation, activities, and local transport during the program.
Applications will open on the 8th of September
